LIMS SUMMER SCHOOL 2024 IN MEMORY STUDIES

6 days, from Monday 26 to Saturday 31 August 2024

Department of Humanities – Department of Sociology and Social Research

Memory studies are a recent, international, multi- and inter-disciplinary academic field. It has been officially established in 2008 with the publication of the first issue of the scientific journal Memory Studies and is increasingly institutionalizing with its own association and dedicated journals, handbooks, networks, labs and research centers.

Memory studies benefit from the contribution of several disciplines which focus on memory as both an object of investigation and a research perspective, starting from different theoretical and methodological backgrounds as well as different thematic interests: history, sociology, anthropology, law, cultural studies, philosophy, psychology, literature and media studies. At the same time, memory scholars from different disciplines are developing shared, despite multifarious, languages, epistemologies, and methodologies which can contribute to innovative research trends within their own disciplinary fields.

This first edition of the LIMS Summer School aims to offer an introduction to this increasingly rich and stimulating discipline, with classes and activities that especially concentrate on one of the basic questions driving the field, namely: what is memory? Is it a function of the mind, the result of a socio-historical process, or something in between? During the classes and the related activities memory experts from different fields, namely history (ancient to contemporary), sociology, psychology, semiotics, anthropology, literature and media studies will introduce the possible answers to this major question and contribute to configuring a multi-disciplinary and inter-disciplinary picture of memory studies and their major research topics and approaches.

PROGRAM

All lectures, seminars and activities will be in English.

The program includes 8 hours per day of face-to-face activities, including classes, data sessions, open debates, visits and excursions, and the participation to the LIMS international conference, according to the following provisional scheme:

Day 1	welcome breakfast; class 1: introduction to memory studies; classes 2-4: memory studies and sociology; memory studies and history
Day 2	English guided tour to Bolzano: contested city monuments and spaces (with Hannes Obermair); data sessions; discussion; pizza
Day 3	classes 5-7: memory studies, literature and media; memory studies and semiotics; memory studies and psychology; inaugural roundtable of the LIMS international conference 'Searching for Memory between the Mind and the World'
Day 4	LIMS international conference 'Searching for Memory between the Mind and the World'
Day 5	LIMS international conference 'Searching for Memory between the Mind and the World'
Day 6	English guided tour to Rovereto: War Museum and War memorial; discussion; farewell drink
